

OUTDOOR TEAMBUILDING

Why not take advantage of a beautiful local park or the lovely sunshine while you have the chance? It's a well-known fact that breaking routine and getting fresh air are two easy ways to boost creativity. Outdoor team building activities encourage participants to bond while learning to build camaraderie, improve communication, establish or improve trust, and develop decision making strategies.

Top 3 pieces of planning advice for organizing a summer team building event:

1. Venue or Location

You can build a stronger group dynamic and enjoy some fresh air with an exciting outdoor team building activity at any of your local parks.

2. Get out of your comfort zone

Team building events can be awkward—people aren't keen to expose themselves in front of their colleagues and can be shy, at least at first. While it may be difficult, it's important to try and get everyone out of their comfort zone while still maintaining a positive atmosphere.

3. Define your goal

Staff should know exactly what the intent of the team building activity is (other than getting out of work for a few hours!)

- Make it accessible to everyone
- Encourage Collaboration
- Have some SERIOUS FUN!
